A formidable reputation has been built over four decades by the Garwyn Occupational Disease Units to handle the complex and diverse challenges of disease claims. It is a reputation upon which many insurers and corporate clients have come to depend, both to protect their balance sheet and their corporate reputation.

An unrivalled breadth of expertise

Central to the Garwyn Occupational Disease service is the personalised approach taken to each client and the handling of their claims. This is despite the fact that clients come from a broad spectrum of business sectors, from coal mining, gas supply, power and utilities, shipbuilding, asbestos removal and stripping, manufacturing and civil engineering. We have significant experience in the management of all types of disease claims and this experience extends to include the closure of run-off accounts. We place high value upon quality and our adjusters are committed to meeting client set targets and exceeding expectations.

The key to delivering such an effective, yet tailored, service is the investment made in our people, combined with embracing the latest advances in technology to streamline processes whilst providing the highest possible standards of data quality. A clear focus on monitoring the performance of our Adjusters is also central to the results achieved.

Thorough investigation

Thorough, informed investigation is essential for any claim relating to occupational disease. Our expert adjusters review medical evidence, the potential for raising a limitation defence as well as the liability of the policyholder. All other Insurers and potential defendants are contacted to determine the apportionment of any necessary payment, with quantum carefully considered before any offer is made or authorised.

The right balance

Finding the right balance between early settlement of meritorious claims and a strict cost control for our clients sets us apart from other adjusters. Instructing specialist Defence Solicitors also enables us to apply the right expertise to each case in order to achieve appropriate settlement levels for claimants whilst keeping legal costs to a minimum.

Why choose the Garwyn Occupational Disease Service?

- Unrivalled specialist technical expertise to handle all types of disease claims
- A focus on providing early resolution of meritorious claims and avoidance of unnecessary litigation
- Leading-edge web-enabled systems give clients flexible access to claims data online
- Changing market dynamics are reflected in our fees
